Collaborative Days

We are sometimes asked as staff members, what happens on a Collaborative Day at school? Why are they so important?

Ecole Deer Meadow staff use these days for as much as we can. A typical school day does not allow for grade teams to meet and plan together, and the precious hours on collaborative days are used for things that include, but are not limited to, the following: academic planning and interventions, social emotional wellness discussion and planning, discussions about cross-curricular connections and teachings, Indigenous foundational learning, Collaborative Response Meetings to discuss various needs and interventions for students, lesson/unit and year planning and sharing, and much much more!

We have the opportunity to work together everyday, but the privilege of time for rich discussion, planning, intervention and grade team collaboration happens on these days, and our students are the direct beneficiaries of the work!
